1890's Victor Webless Crescent Glove

New to the hobby just recently found. Glove is adult size 9" tall 7.5" wide with nice rolled leather piping. Group shot is to show size next to other adult size period gloves. The lining has one smaller size hole at the base of the finger slots otherwise nice and soft. There is some chaffing to the front but the leather is not flaking off. Overall, a great example of a super tough glove to find especially associated with a brand.....$5,000

1950's Mickey Mantle Rawlings XPGH Heart of the Hide Personal Model Glove

The real deal USA model! Produced only in 1968 in limited numbers, very few Mickey Mantle XPGHs have survived or ever come up for sale. Even fewer in this condition, given its fragility. Almost an exact replica of Mantle's outfielder's glove down to the super rare spiral web he was famous for. This particular gem is EX+ with all original lacing, sharp stampings of Mantle's signature in the pocket and HOH stamp, and a fine Rawlings label. Possibly, the finest example extant.

Also included are a rare signed photo of him wearing the model (PSA/DNA LOA), a 1964 Sport magazine with Ozzie Sweet's photo of Mantle posing with the glove, a vintage 8" x 10" print of the Sweet photo licensed by Mantle's sons (LOA), and a short history of the model.

A close to mint example of the very common XPG6 recently was recently flipped on eBay for $2,295. Be a Barry Halper!.....$3,250

Offering a host of vintage baseball glove restoration services to clean, preserve, soften, and uncover the leather grain and stampings:

Services include:

- Cleaning: leather inside and out, silk tags, grommets, buttons and buckles
- Dirt, rocks, and debris removal from inside finger stalls
- Re-conditioning: Various methods used based upon the type, quality, and condition of the leather in order to minimize/prevent darkening
- Fixing broken laces (relacing) & lacing when laces are missing (I have 30-40 lbs. of vintage laces I use to color and style match when possible)
- Removing Ink, paint, and other substances (some I can completely remove, others partially)
- Fixing minor rips, tears and holes (various sewing methods, leather glues, and/or color-matched leather repair compounds) on outside of leather and some areas of liner (palm, bottom of where fingers connect; finger stalls are not usually possible for repair)
- Piping touch up (color matched) to prevent further deterioration
- *I do not replace liners or piping, nor do I stain or change leather colors to misrepresent the glove differently than it was manufactured.

I work to keep gloves as original as possible with the goal to preserve and protect them for the next generation. Every glove is different, and some are better candidates than others based upon their condition and leather quality. I have cleaned, restored, and/or repaired more than 100 of my own gloves (and many for other collectors) in the past 5 years, and would love to help you. I have a dedicated workbench with the right tools and materials and work on a few gloves each week. Prices are reasonable. I would love to help you.
